

M'NAMARA'S TRIAL STARTED TODAY IN LOS ANGELES, CAL.

DARROW MAKES FIRST POINT IN DEFENSE WHEN HE ASKS FOR CHANGE OF VENUE.

OVERRULED OBJECTION

Court Holds That Prisoners Can Obtain Fair Trial in Los Angeles and Orders Case Continued.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]
Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 11.—An enormous crowd besieged the court room today at the formal opening of the trial of the McNamara brothers, charged with the destruction of the Times building, causing the death of twenty-one persons, on October 10, 1910.

Entrances Guarded.
All entrances were guarded and only those with credentials permitted to enter. The courtroom is located on the eighth floor of the million dollar Hall of Records.

The McNamara brothers were brought from jail, handcuffed to deputies and guarded by city police. They expressed confidence in the outcome of the trial.

Both men were well groomed and appeared little the worse for their long incarceration. Judge Walter Hordwell, presiding at the trial, is noted as a strict disciplinarian and today the proceedings moved rapidly. As soon as court opened the roll of the remaining fifty-four members of the initial venire was called.

The defense then presented the affidavits supporting its formal motion for a change of judges which alleged bias and prejudice on the part of Judge Hordwell. The court listened intently and when the reading was concluded immediately denied the motion.

The defense excepted to this ruling and the first vital step by Attorney Darrow had then been taken. The defense alleges that Judge Hordwell's action in disregarding the affidavits of prejudice is certain ground for reversal in case of conviction.

With this matter out of the way, the defense formally announced its demand for separate trials for John and James McNamara.

This right was based on the California code, which, however, gives the district attorney the right to elect which case shall be tried first.

There was a brief interruption while the attorneys conferred in an effort to determine which defendant should face the court first.

James B. McNamara first. James B. McNamara will be tried first for murder in connection with the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times building. This was decided today when Judge Walter Hordwell, presiding in the case, sustained a motion for the defense to try John and James McNamara separately.

Having the right to elect which of the defendants' fate should be decided, District Attorney Frederickson announced he would call James ahead of his brother.

In announcing his decision state attorney Frederickson said: "We will try James B. McNamara first and we ask the court to order John J. McNamara back to jail."

"That can be done later," said the court. Judge Hordwell then ordered a recess until two o'clock when examination of the veniremen began.

CHINESE REBELS IN SUCCESSFUL ATTACK ON CITY OF WUCHANG

Notable Victory Is Reported—Foreigners Are Protected by the Gunboats.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Hankow, Oct. 11.—The revolutionaries won a notable victory, gaining possession of the city of Wuchang after a battle with loyal troops. Foreign residents were not molested. Five gunboats are in the river to protect Hankow.

Cruisers Asked For.
For further protection of Hankow, should necessarily arise, foreign consuls telegraphed their governments for warships to be sent. Both American and Japanese cruisers are expected tonight.

Troops Rushed.
[BY UNITED PRESS.]
Peking, China, Oct. 11.—5,000 troops have been rushed to Hankow to protect foreign residents there. Dispatches from Wu Chang say that prior to the capture of the town by rebels the commander of the imperial troops was assassinated.

Viceroy Fleed.
The Viceroy fled, together with thousands of foreigners and the victorious rebels are pillaging and burning all over the province.

Wu Chang Captured.
Hankow, China, Oct. 11.—The greatest anxiety is felt here over the fate of twenty-five American missionaries who were in Wu Chang yesterday when the city was captured by rebels. All communication is cut off.

Province of Nu Peh.
Peking, Oct. 11.—A revolution of the most formidable proportions has broken out in the central province of Nu Peh. Wu Chang, the capital, is in the hands of the rebels and the great commercial city of Hankow is threatened.

Well Organized.
Unlike most Chinese uprisings the present movement is well organized and is being led by some of the most progressive men in China. The cities of Wu Chang and Hankow face each other across the Yang Tse Kiang river.

Progressive Cities.
They have a population of more than 1,500,000 and are among the most progressive cities of the empire.

MONROE AFRAID OF GENERAL EPIDEMIC CLOSING SCHOOLS

Infantile Paralysis Makes Appearance in Green County City, Causing Much Excitement.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]
Monroe, Wis., Oct. 11.—Health authorities are taking every precaution today to prevent an epidemic of infantile paralysis. One of the city grade schools was closed and fumigated this morning, following the death of Nathan Sweeney, aged four. Another child is not expected to live. Most all the school children in the city have been exposed and a general epidemic of this death-dealing disease is feared.

FINDS GREAT VALUE
IN UNIVERSITY LIFE

Prof. L. T. Hobhouse of England
Speaks of University Life in America as Most Important Factor.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—The practicality of the training offered by the University of Wisconsin to its students is given attention by Prof. L. T. Hobhouse, an eminent English economist, in the Contemporary Review. Prof. Hobhouse, who is a professor at London University, has recorded his impressions of America. After attributing to Theodore Roosevelt a large share in the creation of the new civic spirit, he speaks of university life as a far more important factor in the public opinion of America than it has ever been in England.

"In a single state like Wisconsin," he said, "with a small population, the university numbers some five thousand students, men and women. A great many of these are at work in the more practical and technical faculties, as those of agriculture and commerce. But the education in these faculties is of a liberal order. It stands close to the practical career of the student, and at the same time broadens his view of his work and acquaints him, on the one side, with the scientific theory underlying his technique, on the other side with its economic, social, and one may say its ethical bearings. The students of these schools easily obtain responsible positions in the business world, and I have had testimony quite independent of the professorate to the effect of the introduction of the university training in improving not merely the efficiency, but the morality of business. More generally a university like that of Wisconsin, which is at the head of the newer type, stands in close relation to the state. It rests on the loyal support of the farming population; it depends on the state for its endowment. Yet one hears little of attempts to interfere with freedom of teaching, and the farmer thinks a good deal more of the school of agriculture than he does of moral philosophy or experimental psychology, he is so thoroughly willing to render to the academic interest its quid pro quo."

Finished Work. Circuit court Judge Grimm finished his work here yesterday and will not return until first Tuesday in November. He will attend the Green county court before returning to Janesville.

MONEY OFFERED TO OTHER ASSEMBLYMEN BY LORIMER PARTY

Names of Richard Hagen and John Griffin Mentioned in Lorimer Matter Today in Connection With Bribe.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, Oct. 11.—The name of State Representative Richard Hagen of Chicago, was today brought into the Lorimer investigation. Hagen was, it is said by Representative Farrell, to have been approached in the 1909 deadlock with an offer of a thousand dollars for his vote. Hagen has been subpoenaed. State Senator George McCormick denied the story told yesterday by John Peffer, who said McCormick had offered $2,500 for his (McCormick's) vote.

Griffin's Statement.
[BY UNITED PRESS.]
The report that John Griffin, a Chicago contractor and member of the legislature, told him there was $1,000 in it for him if he would vote for Lorimer, was made by Henry Carroll, a former member of the legislature. He declared Griffin made the same offer to a number of other assemblymen. He also swore that the night before his election Lorimer sent for him and said he had arranged to "put over" the next day by the democrats. Later, Carroll withdrew the words, "by the democrats," saying Lorimer had not used them.

NEW INTERPRETATION OF THE BRIBERY LAW

SENATOR HEYBURN DECLARES CORRUPT MOTIVE MUST BE PROVEN WITH THE GIV-ING OF MONEY.

WITNESSES ON STAND
Superior Attorney Could Give No Accurate Account of Disposal of $5,000 in Stephenson
Case Today.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]
Milwaukee, Oct. 11.—Senator Heyburn, chairman of the Stephenson investigation committee, speaking for himself today, said he believed the interpretation of the Wisconsin law that the mere giving of money to electors to be illegal could not stand unless predicated upon corrupt motives.

Under such interpretation it would be necessary to prove corruption or bribery in each case of money given in order to establish any violation.

Last week Heyburn caused comment by saying he believed the law contemplated the construction that the mere giving, regardless of motive, constituted an offense and this was the interpretation placed on the law yesterday by Senator Blaine.

Senator Heyburn apparently regards such interpretation as unconstitutional.

Solon L. Porlin of Superior, attorney, who received $5,000 of Stephenson money, was on the stand all morning and was questioned regarding the disbursement, but could give no detailed account for $5,000.

He kept $500 for himself. He made no report until called on later by the state legislative committee. He declined any corrupt practices.

Among the witnesses sworn today was Attorney General L. H. Hancock, who received $250 of Stephenson money. Among other witnesses summoned was W. L. Esenau, superintendent of public property.

FOX RIVER VALLEY THREATENED TODAY BY SERIOUS FLOOD

High Water Has Weakened Government Levee Near Portage Which,
If Broken, Would Flood
Large Area.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]
Portage, Wis., Oct. 11.—The Fox River valley is in imminent danger of serious flood because of the high water condition of the Fox river. The whole country between Portage and Oshkosh may suffer for the government levee
just below this city is feared unsafe.
Hundreds of men are working, placing sand-bags on the levee to strengthen it.

Money and Food.
Black River Falls, Oct. 11.—Money and food is being received here from all parts of the surrounding country, and the work of rehabilitating this flood-stricken city is rapidly going on.
Food is needed worst and the supply is none too great.

May Close Schools.
La Crosse, Oct. 11.—With hardly enough to meet the school payroll for one month the city council of Black River Falls may be forced to close the schools. "Our school fund is near dead rock and unless aid comes from the outside we may be forced to stop the city schools," City Clerk Parsons said today.

Tomah Ready.
Following a mass meeting at Tomah, Wis., citizens in the armory there last night at which a resolution was made urging the city council to appropriate $1,000 for the rebuilding of Black River Falls, the council met in special session and appropriated the amount.

Sure to Rebuild.
Positive assurance that Black River Falls will be rebuilt was given at a meeting of the council there last night when a committee of business men was appointed to select a site for the new business section.

Cave $1,000.
Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—Mrs. Anna
M. Vilas, widow of former Senator Win. F. Vilas, today contributed $1,000 toward the fund for the relief of food sufferers at Black River Falls.

WILL RENEW FIGHT FOR DEEP WATERWAY FROM LAKE TO GULF

Sixth Annual Congress of Lakes to the Gulf Deep Waterway Association Opens in Chicago Tomorrow.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Chicago, Ill., Oct. 11.—Prepared to renew its fight for a stupendous inland waterway system from Lake Michigan through the Mississippi River to the Gulf of Mexico, the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway Association will begin its sixth annual congress in Chicago tomorrow with what promises to be a record-breaking attendance. Secretary Thomas H. Lovelace of the association is in receipt of advices indicating that nearly 10,000 delegates and visitors will attend the gathering.

Every State in the Mississippi Valley and most of the middle western States, it is announced, will be represented by large delegations, including governors and other State officials and committees representing the legislatures, aside from the representatives of numerous commercial organizations which have committed themselves in favor of the great waterway project.

Western and northwestern States touching navigable tributaries of the Mississippi also will be well represented.
The Gulf States and the southwest, including Texas and Oklahoma, have shown a marked increase of interest in the project. Among the governors who have promised to attend
the congress are John Burke of North Dakota, Charles S. Osborn of Michigan, Chester H. Aldrich of Nebraska,
Joseph N. Carey of Wyoming, E. J.
Noel of Mississippi, Augustus B. Williams of Kentucky, C. L. Hanes of South Carolina, H. P. Carroll of Iowa, Em-met O'Neal of Alabama, J. Y. Sanders of Louisiana, Herk S. Lindley of Missouri, and Charles S. Deneen of Illinois.

A special invitation has been extended to Canada to participate in the congress and it is expected that several public officials of the Dominion and some of the commercial organizations will be represented.

At the initial session to be held in the Auditorium tomorrow the opening address will be delivered by W. K.
Kavanaugh of St. Louis, the president of the congress. Among other notable speakers to be heard during the three days' sessions are Secretary of the Interior W. L. Fisher, former Governor David R. Francis of Missouri, Governor Judson Harmon of Ohio,
Congressman Underwood of Alabama, former Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri, Congressman Joseph G.
Cannon of Illinois, and O. P. Austin, chief of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

The most important work of the meeting will hinge on resolutions and committee appointments, and it is proposed to organize an executive committee which cannot fail to command the attention of Congress in the matter of deep waterways. The lakes-to-the-gulf project is the largest and most important scheme for an inland waterway that has ever been proposed in this country and would benefit directly more than one-third of the States of the Union. An initial million of 14 feet depth is advocated for the Mississippi River and its tributaries with an increased desire for a final depth of 24 feet. The association wishes to furnish the central part of the United States with a waterway which will enable the movement of the largest freight and passenger vessels to serve the expanse from the Rocky Mountains to the Alleghenies, 2,765, 000 square miles. The region is among the most productive in the world, and, with water transportation to compete with rail, it will have the advantage of unequaled facilities.

The Illinois and Mississippi rivers will be the main arteries of the proposed system, with the tributaries as inter-als. In general, the plans provide for a great system of waterways to connect all interior States, with outlets on the great lakes and the Gulf of Mexico.

OPEN INVESTIGATION OF EXPLOSIVE RATES

Interstate Commerce Commission to Examine Rules of Express Companies For Transportation of Dangerous Articles.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—The investigation into the reasonableness of the rules and regulations of express companies for the transportation of dangerous articles, which was ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission about two months ago was begun here today. Complaint has been made to the commission that the regulations are unreasonable and unduly burden some shippers. The railway regulations were prescribed by the commission itself, but it is alleged that they not only work a hardship on shippers, but that in certain instances they are practically prohibitive of shipments. The hearing opened today will include an inquiry into the regulations of railway lines in handling similar commodities.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]
Madrid, Spain, Oct. 11.—The Spanish troops are meeting with most determined resistance from the Moors
at Melilla, according to official dispatches today. Since the last outbreak, two weeks ago, the Spanish commanders report the Moors have lost 400 killed and 600 wounded. The total Spanish casualties are given at 240.

OTHER POWERS ACTIVE

Meanwhile Reports Come of Armed Forces of Turks and Arabs Attacking Tripoli Today.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Berlin, Oct. 11.—It was declared from an authoritative source that an armistice has been virtually agreed upon by Turkey and Italy, but not yet decided. "Officially," it was brought about chiefly by Germany aided by the other powers.

London, Eng., Oct. 11.—A fresh attack upon Tripoli by the allied forces of Turkey and Arabs is momentarily expected according to dispatches received this morning.

Lands Field Guns.
The Italian warships have landed field guns to assist the town's defense. Mystery that has enveloped the operations of war still surrounds whatever fighting has already occurred at Tripoli.

No News Direct.
On account of the Italian censorship no direct news can be obtained.
All versions agree that the first serious engagement of the war has been fought.

Large Force.
Berlin professed to have information that the allied Mohammedan
army numbers 20,000 men, but Vienna reduces this number to 3,000.

No News Yet.
Nothing is known of the real whereabouts of the Italian military expedition and all prospects of peace today appear remote.

Want Occupation.
It is generally agreed that no negotiation will be opened up until after the military occupation of Tripoli is completed and that cannot take place until the lapse of a week at least.

Police Reserves Assembled at Burnside Today to Guard Against Possible Trouble. Says This Is Pay Day.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]
Chicago, Oct. 11.—A large number of police reserves were gathered today in the vicinity of the Illinois Central's mammoth shops at Burnside, where 4,000 allied craftsmen, members of the system's federation, are on a strike.

Today is pay day, and all the men on strike were on hand to receive their money. It was feared the presence of so many strikers in the vicinity might lead to trouble.

Milwaukee, Oct. 11.—Just as they were about to retire for the night, William Libbeck and wife, living on the Nicholson road near South Milwaukee, were held up in their home and robbed of $700. Two masked men entered the farm house, and at the point of a revolver demanded the man to tie his wife to the bedpost. Then he was bound securely in a chair. After getting the cash the robbers escaped.
The police were notified several hours
later.

CONNIE MACK
FAMOUS MANAGER OF PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Connie Mack's managerial ability has again asserted itself this year in the American baseball league. Other teams in this league have been forced to bow to the prowess of the Athletic leader. This is the fourth time in the league's history of eleven years that Connie Mack has carried off the coveted prize. The first occasion was in 1902. The second was in 1905, and the third in 1910. Every season Mack has led his men into the world's series. The first time he was beaten by the New York Giants and the next time he secured revenge by defeating the Chicago Cubs last year.

SOPHS IN TRIUMPH
OVER ANNUAL RUSH

Held Celebration at Madison Yesterday Afternoon Over Victory in Annual Clash With Freshmen.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—Four hundred shirtless sophomores of the University of Wisconsin paraded around the capitol square and down State street yesterday afternoon in celebration of their triumph over 500 freshmen in the annual sack rush. The sophs captured nine of the fifteen stuffed sacks.

The rush was a repetition of the struggle in past years to rid the contestants on both sides of shirts and sweaters. The lower campus immediately after the success of this plan. This field was strewn with rags of every color and description, remnants of hundreds of shirts and not a few trousers, and with here and there a stray shoe for someone to garner for a college room souvenir.

One luckless freshman qualified for title in fee simple to the Garden of Eden. A rafter was rushed from the crowd and afforded protection enough to come within the law.

The freshmen were distinguished by hideously painted faces. Ninety policemen selected from the upper classmen, and armed with billy-clubs, did effective duty in regulating the rush. They were headed by Clifford D. Butler, 13, of Eau Claire, one of the millionaires in the university. The other extreme was represented by Kim-Tone, 13, a Chinese student. The freshmen football candidates were on the field in mass but were not permitted to mix in the fight.

Prater houses were the scene of many exciting incidents throughout the afternoon, sophomore members using every method to keep their freshmen brothers from entering the fray later in the day. To this end they lured the freshmen in the basement, tied them to bedposts in their rooms, and at the Psi Upsilon house each one on the roof, from which the victim dropped thirty feet to the ground, unhurt. Another scheme which worked well, was the use of automobiles to take freshmen several miles into the country where the boys were left tied hand and foot by the roadside. It was left to ruralites to release them. By the time they found their way back the rush was ended.

Knights Templar of Ohio. Dayton, O., Oct. 11.—Knights Templar from all parts of the state are in possession of the city and the business section is partly decorated with flags and Masonic emblems. The knights are here for the annual convocation of the grand commandery of Ohio, which began today and will continue over tomorrow. A big parade was one of the chief features of the opening day.

SOPHS IN TRIUMPH
OVER ANNUAL RUSH

Held Celebration at Madison Yesterday Afternoon Over Victory in Annual Clash With Freshmen.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—Four hundred shirtless sophomores of the University of Wisconsin paraded around the capitol square and down State street yesterday afternoon in celebration of their triumph over 500 freshmen in the annual sack rush. The sophs captured nine of the fifteen stuffed sacks.

The rush was a repetition of the struggle in past years to rid the contestants on both sides of shirts and sweaters. The lower campus immediately after the success of this plan. This field was strewn with rags of every color and description, remnants of hundreds of shirts and not a few trousers, and with here and there a stray shoe for someone to garner for a college room souvenir.

One luckless freshman qualified for title in fee simple to the Garden of Eden. A rafter was rushed from the crowd and afforded protection enough to come within the law.

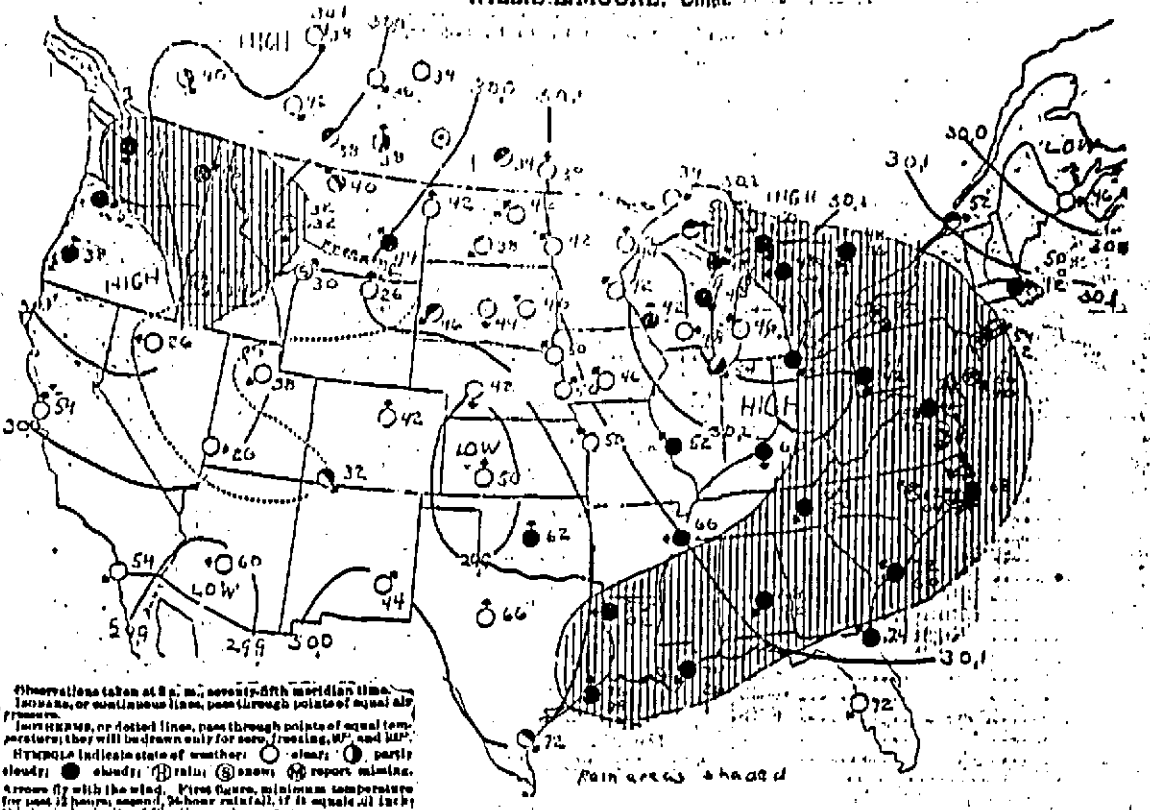

The freshmen were distinguished by hideously painted faces. Ninety policemen selected from the upper classmen, and armed with billy-clubs, did effective duty in regulating the rush. They were headed by Clifford D. Butler, 13, of Eau Claire, one of the millionaires in the university. The other extreme was represented by Kim-Tone, 13, a Chinese student. The freshmen football candidates were on the field in mass but were not permitted to mix in the fight.

Prater houses were the scene of many exciting incidents throughout the afternoon, sophomore members using every method to keep their freshmen brothers from entering the fray later in the day. To this end they lured the freshmen in the basement, tied them to bedposts in their rooms, and at the Psi Upsilon house each one on the roof, from which the victim dropped thirty feet to the ground, unhurt. Another scheme which worked well, was the use of automobiles to take freshmen several miles into the country where the boys were left tied hand and foot by the roadside. It was left to ruralites to release them. By the time they found their way back the rush was ended.

Knights Templar of Ohio. Dayton, O., Oct. 11.—Knights Templar from all parts of the state are in possession of the city and the business section is partly decorated with flags and Masonic emblems. The knights are here for the annual convocation of the grand commandery of Ohio, which began today and will continue over tomorrow. A big parade was one of the chief features of the opening day.

WEATHER BUREAU
WILLIS L. MOORE, Chief

WEATHER CONDITIONS.
The period of atmospheric activity that has prevailed for several weeks seems to have come to an end. The disturbance that occupied the Rocky Mountain region yesterday with a considerable show of strength has frittered away to a small depression on the southern Plains. High atmospheric pressures again prevail over the eastern half of the country, accompanied by generally fair weather except along the Atlantic coast, where rain is falling from New York to North Carolina. The pressure is also high on the North Pacific coast. Rain continued falling yesterday and last night in the northern Plateau region, while snow fell at higher stations in the mountains. The precipitation was heavy at Helena being 1.32 inches and at Boise 1.34. It will be fair tonight and Thursday in this vicinity, without much change in temperature.

CULTIVATING INDUSTRY.

"For the past three years no merchant or manufacturer has contemplated enlargement or expansion of his business. It is attended with too much risk. The policy of cultivating industry to secure property for the support of old age has been suppressed by a tax on property and industry, so that individual effort is made only in a half-hearted manner and co-operation is feared and shunned as a source of all possible evils. What is wanted is a wise and sensible administration that will put business on a just and equitable basis, and keep it there, so that it may be active and profitable. Neither capital nor labor should be allowed to assume any dictatorial authority. Business is the life of the entire population, and should be kept for the general benefit."—New Orleans Plainville.

This is the closing paragraph in an article on "Business As the Country's Principal Asset," in which the writer attempts to show that the prosperity of the nation is dependent upon the success of business.

In these days of criticism when "big business" interests are under the ban, many people are threatened with the notion that all lines of business are more or less corrupt, and the tendency is to class merchandising and manufacturing as distinctive, but the fact remains that every calling in life partakes largely of the nature of business.

The field of agriculture is the largest and most productive channel in the list, and while it represents a great army of small share-holders, every last man is a business man, and should be personally interested in the prosperity of every other line, because of mutual interests.

The products of the farm find ready market at good prices when factories are running full time and when everybody finds employment at living wages. It is a mistaken notion that the luxuries are the only things which suffer in times of depression. During the last general panic in 1893-94 the consumption of flour fell off one half, and meat was out of the question in the average home.

The money spent for clothing and shoes, and all other necessities, was only a fraction of what is spent when times are good, and as a result half the factories were closed. An army of idle men-tramped over the country, seeking in vain for work, and soup houses flourished in every city.

The fact is that every last man in this free land is interested either directly or indirectly in business. It is the dominant factor and always will be. The trouble with many of us is that we are not content to manage our own business, but aspire to take a hand in regulating everything in sight. The present outlook indicates that there won't be so much business to manage by another year, and tired humanity will have a chance for a breathing spell.

NOT ECONOMISTS.

"Postmaster Thompson of the Standard (California) Postoffice Savings bank has arrived at the apparently well-warranted conclusion that saving money is not a strong point with California college boys. After being established for over a month in the Palo Alto university, the government savings bank has not a single depositor. Worst of all, the postmaster lugubriously adds, 'It never will have any.'"

"In their ignorance of the value of the dime and the nickel we may see the reason why so few university men ever get into the millionaire class. For a thorough mastery of the units must precede an expert handling of the addition and multiplication tables. Those who fail to learn this lesson in the hey day of youth will have to work out the problem later in life with toll and tribulation. Every one has a free choice. It all depends whether he prefers to eat all his cake for breakfast or to save some of it for supper. But those who favor the breakfast plan are liable to go to bed supperless."

The Los Angeles Times thus comments on the lack of thrift among the university students, and yet it could hardly be expected that this class of boys without an income would be able to open a bank account. "The value of money, however, is seldom appreciated by boys who have everything done for them until after they have reached man's estate, and if a liberal allowance has been furnished, the habit of spending becomes so thoroughly established that it is difficult to reform."

The boy who gets the most out of the college education, is usually the boy who puts the most into it. Like everything else, values are in proportion to toll and sacrifice. The making of self-made men dates back, as a rule, to the experience of hard knocks, where thrift and economy are necessary to existence.

The things which a boy falls to learn during the formative years of life, are more difficult to acquire later on, and the value of a dollar is one of the essentials.

MARTYRS OF SCIENCE.

The Technical World Magazine, some months ago, contained the following incident of men who have sacrificed life in the interest of science. "The men who are experimenting to-day, in the field of aviation, are engaged in a work more hazardous, and when a tragedy occurs, people are free to criticize the men who are attempting to solve the problem, as foolhardy adventurers."

This sort of criticism is unjust, for the secrets of science are so carefully concealed that they never come to the surface except through human effort inspired by faith and determination which recognize no obstacles. These are the kind of men who are experimenting in the field of radium, and this is the story:

"If peace with her victories no less renowned than war, then Dr. Mirkan K. Kasabian, who died in Philadelphia on July 12, was a hero perhaps of even greater caliber than the heroes of many wars. For Dr. Kasabian died of skin cancer brought on by X-ray burns in his marvelous work as one of the foremost specialists in America. For years, unknown to many thousands of sufferers he was treating Dr. Kasabian, slowly dying from the effects of the very rays that were being directed by him to the cure of others, went about his daily work."

"Last year it was found that the skin cancer induced by the rays had spread up the left arm and had caused the enlargement of the glands under his arm. These glands were removed by an operation by Dr. Chalmers D. Costa, professor of surgery in the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia. The wounds did not heal and a second operation, consisting of the removal of the larger muscles on the left side of the chest, was performed four months ago. After this operation on the pectoral muscles it was found that the whole left side had been affected and his condition was pronounced critical. About ten days before his death he went to the hospital to have his chest dressed, and while there collapsed. He never left the hospital alive."

"The fact of the matter is that the field of radio-activity has furnished more than its quota of martyrs to science. Professor Curie, who, with his wife, Madame Curie, won a place in the history of science by the discovery of radium, was perhaps saved from a martyr's lingering death by the street accident which cut short his life. His journey to London with the first tube of radium over exhibited there resulted in a wound in the chest which took months to heal, for the radium emanation passed through his waistcoat and underclothes and burned his chest to the bone. His experiments with radium scorched his hands and arms which were almost paralyzed to the elbows and rendered unrepresentable to strangers."

Statistics show that the United States government has the greatest employment bureau in the world in the Civil Service Commission. The commission takes care of the employment of all of the 365,088 persons who work for the executive branch of the government in various ways. Of this number 222,278 hold office as a result of competitive examinations held by the commission, and their tenure is not subject to the whim of a statesman or a politician. This army of 365,088 does not include all of the persons who serve the government. This number has to do with the executive employees. In addition there are 2,115 employees of the Senate and the House, and 481 men and women who serve in the Congressional library. Then there are 4,390 employees of the judiciary, including judges, attorneys and marshals, and their clerical assistants and messengers, referees in bankruptcy, and United States commissioners.

State Senator Blaine, the man responsible for the charges against Senator Stephenson, admitted before the investigating committee yesterday that he had no definite knowledge, but was influenced by rumors. Charges based on rumors are sometimes libelous, and in no case worthy of consideration.

Woman suffrage was defeated by a small margin in California, yesterday, but the initiative, referendum and recall went through with flying colors. California is badly troubled with the reform interloper.

In discussing the proposed reorganization of the United States Steel Corporation, J. Pierpont Morgan asked the very pertinent question, "How can you unscramble eggs?" Nobody knows but Wickersham.

LITTLE CHILDS.

Have a good time, little child, When you're in, for after while This yere world won't be the same—Set of free and easy game. Look at it now to you. As do seasons come and go. They ain't bringin' Ah'm afraid.

Trouble closer to you, little child, Joy you'll find in romp an' play. Make do most of every day. For each day comes once for sho' But it don't come any mo' But a fac', now you've heard, Pleasantly, malik mah word.

Have a good time, little child, While you've got chance to smile. When you're all in cause to fret When you're all in gwin to get Nuff to eat and nuff to wear, An' of kin' so very far. But you'll all has got to go In do path of life bese. You'll miss hustle, all alone, To feed children of yo' own. Don't yo' hurry, little child, For yo' ain't no crotch, my hun', For to be a grown-up man.

Have a good time, little child, For in less a little while You'll be working every day And to keep do woff away. You'll be worried what to get All do po' chop what it eat, An' do houses an' do cakes. Lak yo' good of mammy makes An' do wood an' do rent. Which will take yo' las' red cent. Don't be anxious for to vote And a family burden take. Ho! yo' houses for awhile! Have a good time, little child.

ACCORDING TO UNCLE ABNER.

"I have heard of one or two fellows who would rather be right than pleasant, but I have heard of a blundering fellow who would rather be wrong than pleasant."

When I see a village milliner's upper lip all black I make up my mind there has been some drummer along that has got a dyed mustache.

It seems as though in our neighborhood everybody enjoys a funeral thoroughly except the late defunct. Scripture says a horse is a vain thing for safety, but by golly I think an automobile is a blundering sight vater."

It is a wise man's motto that knoweth his own master. I see an Eastern scientist says ambition is an unyielding desire to keep diggin'. A lot of folks around here have been affected that way but they all thought they had shined get credit for industry by blowing up their back gardens are only lookin' for angle worms.

Why in tunket are they called angle worms if they only move in curves? Whenever I hear a fellow constantly referred to as a "good" man I always wonder what he is good for but nobody seems to know.

There is only one way to take down a stovepipe without gettin' root on the carpet and that is to take up the carpet first.

Elmer Hicks says he is going to get a job workin' at the plumber's trade. By golly I didn't think anybody worked at that.

About this time every year I go and look at some fellow that chaws tobacco and I find that I have got one thing to be thankful for, anyhow.

Fully woe it will be time for all of us to borrow a dollar or two and give somebody we don't care anything about a present that he doesn't want.

There is a good deal in knowing how to wear clothes. Some fellows can put on a $7 hand-me-down suit and make a noise like a member of the Four Hundred while others can wear a $100 broadcloth and be picked up by the police for having no visible means of support.

THE CORN DANCE.

The corn dance now is all the go. Out in the rural parts. The red ear and its well earned burs. Comments the loving hearts. A corn dance is a pleasant thing. To go to don't you know. Providing that the corn is on. The other fellow's too.

HELPFUL HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

How to keep a cock? First, catch your cock. Then proceed meticulously and deadly and place your house and lot in your cock's name. Then buy her a six cylinder Pope-Toledo and a piano. Fit her up an elaborate boudoir on the first floor of the house. Hire for her a manicurist, a butler, several hand maidens and second-hand maidens, also an Angora poodle. Place a theatre box at the cock's disposal and make your wife do the cooking. In this manner you may be able to keep your cock. Of course extreme cases may require greater attention. How to make a silk hat? Take one joint of stovepipe. Then catch seven or eight black cats and skin them, stretch the skins tightly over the stovepipe. Brush carefully. If the hat is too tall use a little shortening.

How to cure a bald-headed Brussels carpet? Take a pair of barber's clippers and clip the carpet all over, then shave it carefully with a safety razor so it will all look alike. It will then all grow out evenly.

WITH APOLOGIES TO JOE MILLER. The egg comes from the chicken. The chicken from the egg. Now which one is entitled To greater praise, we beg? Perhaps you choose the chicken Because you like it fried Or stewed or cranberry roasted.

With oysters stuffed inside. And then, again, it may be The egg by which you boast When it is boiled or scrambled Or poached and served on toast.

Of course, without the chicken, There'd be no eggs, and then, Without the egg it's certain There couldn't be a hen.

Which one of them is greater? Debate and do your worst. The entire question hinges On which one started first.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

TO THE WOMAN OF THE HOUSE.

Do you sometimes envy the wives of the very rich? Permit me to suggest that, as a rule, those women whom you envy are restless, dissatisfied and unhappy. They unhappy?

How else can they be, depending upon the shells rather than upon the kernels of life? Great houses, sumptuous furnishings, costly gowns, jewels, linens, retinues of dependents—these often are mere imitations of a happy state.

And you, madam—You live in a cozy cottage, do your own housework, aided, it may be, by a single domestic or none. You are busy about the thousand and one chores of a wife and mother. You are not idle nor merely a drudge.

Do you fancy that when a rich woman buys a new gown the possession brings her any special thrill? Expensive garments are no novelty. She feels little more joy than if she were a well-dressed wooden doll.

But you—When out of your savings or from the slender purse of a good husband you achieve your new cloak or gown, what a triumph of good management! To you the garment stands for something earned, a joy, a rich woman can know.

And so of the overcoat for the husband, and the new suit for the boy, and the girl's hat—all of which must be planned in advance.

Trifles? To the rich, yes; to you, symbols in the family life, occasions of satisfaction. There is a profession that becomes commonplace, and there is a sanctity that makes for variety and contentment.

Envy not the rich wife. There is little more to her than a hotel, a place of transient lodging, a point of departure. Her husband is merely the man who signs checks for the bills. Her children, if there be any, are turned over to the tender mercies of nurse and tutor.

Idle, but tired of the dissipation of society, free to enjoy all things, but unsatisfied with the trappings of useless luxury, longing for the bread of life and given a stone—these women are rather to be pitied than envied.

But you, madam—yours is the pleasure of doing things worth while, the satisfaction of duty done, the rewards of self sacrifice, the joys of realization and, above all, the love of those whom you love.

Would you trade places? Sincere Word Never Lost. Never was a sincere word utterly lost. Never a magnanimity fell to the ground but for one man who can stand properly there are a hundred that will stand adversity.—Carlyle.

Live, Hustling Merchants Need More Rock County Telephones

There are quite a number of the up-to-date retailers in this city who have found it convenient and necessary to have more than one Rock County Telephone in their place of business. The present day system of buying goods is through the telephone and the merchant who sees to it that his customer can be connected with his store almost instantly is pretty sure to hold that person's trade which might go elsewhere as a result of being given the "Busy" answer from the Central office.

THERE ARE 2240 SUBSCRIBERS TO ROCK COUNTY TELEPHONES.

Every one of these people is a customer of yours or a possible customer. The cost of an extra phone line in your business place would be insignificant as compared with the amount of good resulting. It means extra business and extra business is what we are all after.

An extension phone is a wonderfully convenient instrument; it saves its cost in time in a day many times; it will pay for itself every month. You have two telephones on the one line in your place of business or your home at $1.25 per month extra.

Increase your sales with an extra telephone and let us give you complete detailed information about the matter at once.

SESSIONS OF SYNOD IN PROGRESS TODAY

COMMITTEE REPORTS AND SEVERAL ADDRESSES AT MEETING THIS MORNING.

AN OFFICER RESIGNS

Rev. L. C. Smith Synodical Superintendent of Missions Offers Resignation This Morning.

At the session of the sixtieth conference of the Wisconsin Synod of the Presbyterian church this morning, reports of various committees and officers were read and accepted and a number of speakers gave short addresses relating more especially to the educational and mission work in the state.

Following the reading of the report of the Synodical Superintendent of state missions, Rev. L. C. Smith of Wausau, offered his resignation to the synod, stating that although he had been offered the position by the committee for another year, and, in fact, as long as he wished to hold it, promising at the same time to remove some of the attendant hardships, he did not feel capable of bearing the burden which was responsible a position involved. Mr. Smith explained his reason for his action, paying tribute to the men who had aided him in the mission work of the state. He laid emphasis on the fact that the Synod needed to stand together at this time as it is the crucial moment in the work and that all differences should be laid aside. The Synod intended to set upon the resignation at the session this afternoon.

Speakers This Morning.
Among the speakers this morning, short talks on the value of the Presbyterian college at Wausau, the condition of the institution and the relation which the church of the state should bear to it, were given by the following: President W. O. Carper of Carroll college, Rev. P. H. Perkins, Rev. J. R. Clelland, Rev. H. H. Baker, Rev. E. A. Cutler and Rev. S. P. Todd. Rev. George E. Hunt, of Madison gave a very interesting address on "The Wisconsin Home Missions," indicating their scope and value and arguing for their further extension.

Committees Appointed.
Committees were appointed by the Moderator at the session this morning as follows: Bills and Overtures, Rev. S. N. Wilson, Rev. J. W. P. Roth, Jr., and Elder H. E. Andrews.
Judiciary: Rev. L. Hansen, Rev. B. Thompson, and Elder James Shearer.
Attendance and leave of absence, Rev. L. McAndrew, C. L. Richards and Elder R. W. Gifford.
Finance: Elders W. M. Post and James Montgomery.
Resolutions: Rev. H. L. Moore and Rev. J. H. Stephenson.

Committees on the Presbyterian records for the five presbyteries in the state were also appointed.

Afternoon Meeting.
At the meeting this afternoon, several speakers of national reputation who gave addresses after the preliminary business session was over. Rev. Joseph E. McAfee, of New York City, spoke on "Home Missions in Their Broader Aspect," and Rev. H. S. Donaldson of Milwaukee conducted a conference on "Men and Religion."

At the meeting this evening Rev. Owen Davies Odell of Indianapolis will be the speaker.

The sessions of the woman's mission department were open this morning at the V. M. C. A. building and continued this afternoon. A number of speakers told of the work which had been accomplished and committee reports were heard.

Following the session of the Synod this afternoon the delegates were treated to an automobile ride through the city in autos furnished by the members of the Industrial and Commercial club.

The number in attendance at the convention numbers over two hundred. The delegates are entertained at dinner and supper by the local Presbyterian church in their dining hall, the ladies of the church having charge of the meals. Accommodations are furnished at the homes of the church members and at the hotels.

Election of Officers.

Following the address of the retiring Moderator, Rev. Samuel N. Wilson of Redwooding, and the administering of the sacrament of the Lords' Supper, officers were elected as follows: Rev. S. L. McKee, West Salem, Moderator; Rev. Louis Peak, Fond du Lac, clerk; Rev. Ernest Honke, Baraboo, and Rev. George Shepard, Crandon, assistant clerks.

Stop That Cough in a Minute

Would you give morphine or chloroform to your baby or take it yourself? Of course not. Yet most patent cough cures contain one or both. They stop a cough in a minute, which is dangerous. A cough should be cured internally by healing the lungs, loosening the phlegm, throwing it out, which is done by coughing. Badger Cough Balsam does not contain morphine or chloroform. It is made by perspiration from bloodroot, lobelia, pine bark, wild cherry, etc. It cures a cough in a few days without filling the lungs with poisonous phlegm. The irritation is relieved, the lungs healed without danger of pneumonia. It's safe for children or old people. Get a bottle today for 25 cents. Every Man Who Drinks or is Addicted to the Use of Drugs Can be easily and Quickly Cured at the Neal Institute, Milwaukee

The habitual use of liquors or drugs is altogether bad. The drink or drug victim finds every avenue of employment closed to him. To the business man this condition means ruin; it robs the professional man of his talents and his reputation; it undermines the health and destroys the morals of the average working man and takes from him his earning capacity. Homes are broken up, the wives and children suffer and are even in danger.

That excessive drinkers cannot quit the habit without medical help has been proven beyond a question of doubt. Again and again they "swear off," but the torments they suffer, attending the effort, always take them back to their old ways. Alcoholism or the drink habit is caused by the accumulation of alcoholic poison in the system taken on too fast for nature to expel. It is this poison which causes the intense craving which only more liquor or drugs, whichever the case may be, can only temporarily satisfy. The treatment originated by Dr. Benjamin E. Neal is composed of pure, harmless vegetable medicines taken through the mouth and never by hypodermic injections. The treatment is not severe; on the contrary, it is so gentle that a child could take it with absolute safety. It is guaranteed harmless and quick in its results. The Neal treatment not only destroys the craving for liquor and drugs, but in addition it restores the weakened system to a vigorous condition. Hundreds of "drinking men" and women have found that the Neal three-day treatment for the drink and drug habit is the easiest, quickest and most positive cure known.

At the Neal Institute, in Milwaukee, each patient is at all times under the personal care of regular physicians and attendants and they enjoy all the privacy and comfort of a first-class home, club or hotel. Names are never divulged. A personal call at the Neal Institute is most desirable, but if that is not convenient, complete information and advice will be furnished, prospective patients or their relatives, upon application, by mail, to the Neal Institute, 444 Cass Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

CAR DEPARTMENT
ASSISTANT HERE

Assistant Superintendent of Car Department at South Janesville Today.

C. H. Osborne, assistant superintendent of the car department of the Chicago and North Western railway was here today looking over the department at the yards in South Janesville. The car department here has been repairing cars at a rapid rate and was so rushed with work that extra men were employed and the entire crew put in all the overtime possible and for the past three Sundays have been busily engaged in the work of putting rolling stock in better condition. The gravel crew having been here for such a long time increased the work and with the other miscellaneous work the car department is proud of the record they have set in the number of cars repaired during the past two months.

Robert Bennett was pressed into service as fireman on one of the switch engines yesterday and is back at the old job of stationary engineer again this morning.

EDGERTON SOCIETY
AT ANNUAL BANQUET

T. A. and B. Enjoyed Annual Supper at Congregational Church Dining Hall—Other Edgerton News.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Edgerton, Oct. 11.—One of the most gorgeous social functions of the season occurred here last evening, it being the annual banquet of the T. A. and B. society. The event opened with a reception at their hall, which continued from 8 to 9 o'clock, when an adjournment was taken to the basement rooms of the Congregational church where the ladies of St. Rose's society served an elaborate spread, continuing from 9 to 11 o'clock. A program was interspersed during the meal. At 11 o'clock dancing took place in Academy hall for which the American Harp orchestra of this city furnished the inspiration. The occasion brought out the largest assembly ever known and was thoroughly enjoyed by all participants.

Little Bed-Time Tales

By EDITH HAVENS

The Feast

It was bedtime and mother was reading a story to Edith and Harold.

And it was such an interesting story!

She was reading of the good King Kind Heart, who lived many years ago in a land where there were very many poor people.

The good King loved his people, and he was very unhappy because they were poor. He wanted to do something for them, and for days he would sit in silence trying to think out some plan whereby he could make them all very happy.

One day he called one of his advisors to his side and whispered in his ear.

A short while after the advisor left the palace with a wonderful smile upon his face.

Out into the highways and byways he went with many of the King's servants, seeking out all the poor people, and what he told them brought joy to their hearts.

What do you think the King's messengers told them? He told each and every one that on the morrow the King was to prepare a feast for them all and that they must be at the palace early.

Never had such happiness been known before.

And what a commotion there was at sleep.

The next day was beautiful. Never had the cooks and bakers been preparing the feast so wonderfully fine, get.

All kinds of tempting dishes; the herds never did the sun shine so brightly, and man was singing out his choicest stock, from all corners of the land the poor people poured into the palace. There tables with snow-white table covers and were mothers, fathers, boys, girls, sisters, brothers, grandfathers, grandmothers, and they chatted with happiness, for never before had they known such a day.

After they had eaten their fill the King ordered out his best court dancers and festers, and the poor people marvelled at the wonderful sights they saw. And then the good King bade them all good-night, handing each, as he did so, a bright shiny gold piece from the palace treasury.

Is it a wonder that they loved good King Kind Heart?

"Oh—what a pretty story!" exclaimed Edith as her mother finished. "Why can't Harold and I have some of the poor little children about here to dinner some night?"

"Yes," echoed Harold eagerly.

"I think it would be splendid, and we will," said the good mother.

A few nights later two little boys and two little girls who never before had known what a good time was, came to call on Edith and Harold, and never will they forget the wonderful feast of good things.

Neither will Edith and Harold forget.

THE HEAVENS IN OCTOBER.

By Prof. Eric Doolittle of the University of Pennsylvania.

The motions of Mars and Saturn. Ring eclipse of the Sun Oct. 21-22. Not visible in the Eastern states. Brook's Comet quite visible. The October planets.

The most attractive part of the heavens is undoubtedly that which is now seen in the east in the early evening. Here there has again appeared the beautiful and interesting group of stars known as the Bull, the first of the train of winter constellations whose coming tells us of the ending of another summer. The beautiful little Pleiades, whose appearance in the early evening will continue to separate so rapidly that they will soon be found in quite different regions of the sky. By next October, one year from now, they will be at almost exactly opposite points of the Celestial Sphere.

The apparent paths of the two bodies are shown in Figure 2. Mars will move slowly eastward until October 17, then run westward until December 23, and from this time on will journey eastward with great rapidity. Meanwhile, Saturn will move very slowly westward until January 10, after which date it will move slowly toward the east. Not until April 13 will it reach the point in Aries which it occupies now.

THE ECLIPSE OF OCTOBER 21-22.
The present year has been nearly a barren one so far as eclipses are concerned, for there occur but two, which is the least number possible in any one year, and neither of these are well visible from the United States, except in the extreme Western part. Both of these are eclipses of the sun; the first occurred on April 28, and the second after 8 o'clock in the evening of October 21. At this time the sun will have long since set to observers in the Eastern part of the United States, and, in fact, the eclipse will be wholly invisible to all dwellers in America. The persons on the world who will be the first to see the eclipse begin will be those living a short distance to the west of the Point A, Figure 3. All those within the strip A-B will see the moon move entirely onto the face of the sun, while to those within the region M-N-R-S the sun will be only partly hidden. The eclipse will end at 11 minutes 42 seconds after 2 o'clock on the morning of October 22, the very last trace of it being seen from a point about 300 miles northeast from Australia.

During the eclipse of last April 28 the shadow of the moon swept over this same region of the earth from Australia almost to Central America. This was a total eclipse, of which, when the sun was entirely hidden, some very fine photographs were obtained by an expedition sent for that purpose to the Tonga Islands.

THE PLANETS IN OCTOBER.
Venus, which shone so brilliantly in the west throughout the summer and autumn and which finally left the evening sky on September 16, is now running rapidly out from before the sun, and may be seen shining as a most brilliant star about exactly due east in a short while before sunrise. It is by far the most conspicuous object in this part of the sky, reaching its greatest brightness on October 22. In the telescope it has the form of a very narrow crescent.

At present the most interesting question in connection with this world, so like our own, is that of the length of its day. As the planet is over covered with a dense blanket of clouds so that no markings can be seen upon its surface, the matter must be studied with the spectroscopic instrument with which we can measure how rapidly any point on the turning world is approaching or drawing away from us. Eleven years ago careful measures were thought to show that this turning was quite rapid, the day on our Sister World being about as long as the day with us. Other measures, apparently equally good, made three years later, indicated that the planet turned very slowly—so slowly that its day was just as long as its year—so that on one-half of the planet there was perpetual day and on the other half perpetual night. Most recently, however, confirm the earlier conclusion, leading to a time of rotation only about 10 hours longer than our own. The latter is of the highest interest and importance in connection with the question of the possibility of the existence of any such life as we know upon our nearest neighbor among the planets.

Unfortunately, the observation is a very difficult one, and we cannot even yet regard the latest results as conclusive. At present, however, the balance of evidence seems to lie in favor of the shorter time of rotation.

Mars now shines out well up in the east in the beautiful Constellation of the Bull, just at the northern end of the group of stars known as the Hyades. Each evening the planet is coming into better position for observation, its distance from the earth decreasing from 81,000,000 to 60,000,000 of miles during the month and its apparent size increasing more than one-fourth. With its definite markings and its polar caps, it is a most interesting object in a moderately large telescope.

The planet Saturn, which is now high up in the eastern heavens, is an even more interesting object for observation than Mars to one who possesses only a small telescope. Although the balls of the two planets now appear of almost exactly the same size, the rings of the former are so well widened out that they, as well as its brighter moons, can be very easily seen. During this month the earth is so far below the plane of the rings that they appear wider to us than at any other time during this year.

Jupiter will be seen very low in the southwest for about an hour after sunset, but it is now in far too unfavorable position for satisfactory observation. It will finally leave the evening sky and become a morning star on November 18.

Uranus, which is moving very slowly eastward in its 84-year journey around the sky will be found in the constellation Sagittarius in the position shown in Figure 1.

FAMOUS AMERICAN INDIANS
ALBERT PATSON TERNUM
OSCEOLA.

An Indian chief—light of skin, slender, graceful, handsome—stood confronting a hundred savages with his drawn bow. The threatened men were chiefs and sub-chiefs of the Seminole nation. Brave they were and fierce warriors. Yet they shrank before the leveled arrow of this one leader. For it was well known he never twanged bowstring nor pulled trigger without killing. While the Seminoles hesitated he spoke:

"No treaty shall be signed," said he, "which robs us of our land. The man who sets his name to such a paper dies at my hand."

The speaker was As-sa-he-ho-lar (meaning "Black Drink"). The name has been shortened in history to "Osceola." His mother was daughter of a Creek Indian chief. His father was William Powell, an Englishman. Osceola was born near Chattanooga, Ga., in 1804. When he was a mere child his mother fled from her English husband, taking her son with her, and never pausing in her flight until she reached her father's tribe in southern Georgia. Whether because her husband had maltreated her or for some other cause, she had a mortal hatred for all white men, and she made her son hate them even more bitterly than did she. Both she and Osceola spoke English as readily as their own language.

A Boy Warrior.

The Creek tribe which Osceola and his mother joined went to war in 1818 with the United States. Osceola was only fourteen years old, yet so valiant was he and already so brilliant a commander that he was chosen as one of the tribe's sub-chiefs. He and his people fought in vain against the government troops and were forced to retreat southward into the "Everglades" of Florida. There they joined the Seminoles. Micanopy, the Seminole sachem, was old and a peaceful nature. So the boy, Osceola, quickly became a real war chief of the Seminoles. For the next few years he went from tribe to tribe of the "nation," preaching against the white men and preparing the savages for war. Then came the first great clash with Uncle Sam.

The government decided to ship the whole Seminole nation west of the Mississippi and to pay them a nominal sum for their Florida land. A few chiefs were induced on March 3, 1832, to sign a treaty to this effect. Osceola, in fury, denounced such an act and lashed his people to rebellion. Then it was that he called the council and threatened to shoot dead the first man who should agree to "leave Florida." Micanopy was as wax in the hands of the local Indian agent. But he feared to disobey Osceola more than he dreaded the power of the white men. The agent saw that Osceola was the real power in Florida, so he spread before the young savage a copy of the treaty, begging him to sign it. By way of answer, Osceola drove his knife through the paper. The agent threatened him with the wrath of President Jackson, former conqueror of Florida. Osceola retorted:

"I fear Jackson no more than I fear you."

The conference broke up in disorder. Osceola's hatred of the whites was increased tenfold when they captured his young wife and sold her as a slave. He himself was captured, but escaped from jail inside of two days. After that, it was war to the death. Osceola looked on the Indian agent as his worst enemy. Soon afterward the agent's dead body was found, pierced by fourteen bullets. Major Dade, with 110 soldiers, was marching inland from Tampa when Osceola and a band of braves flung themselves on the troops and slaughtered all but three of them. Then with an inferior force he marched against General Clinch and 1,000 soldiers. He married his little army like an expert tactician. The Indians held off the troops until all their ammunition was gone, then retreated in safety. Osceola himself is said to have slain 40 white men in that fight.

An Act of Treachery.

Battle followed battle, with varying results. At times Osceola used all the wily tricks of his race, pretending to agree to the government's wishes; then, as soon as he was strong enough, breaking out in some new action. When hard pressed he and his men would take refuge in the "Everglades." The Everglades is a huge, marshy Florida lake, 60 miles wide by 160 miles in length, dotted with impenetrable islands and altogether a hopeless maze to one not used to its many hiding places. Thence Osceola would dash forth on his murderous raids. Yet, at his worst, he would never permit his followers to harm a woman or a child.

At last, in 1837, a temporary peace was patched up with the government. Under a flag of truce and a promise of safety Osceola went by invitation to a conference in General Jessup's camp. There he was treacherously seized, carried to St. Augustine and thrown into prison. Thence he was moved to Fort Moultrie, at Charleston, S. C.

Heartbroken, hopeless, the captive Osceola lingered on in prison for a few months. Then he refused food and practically starved himself. He died January 30, 1838. He was but thirty-three years old at the time of his death, but had made his name known and dreaded from one end of America to the other.

MAKING RAIN WITH ROCKETS

Experiments Tried With Considerable Success on a Coffee Plantation in Southern India.

Experiments made to ascertain whether the discharge of explosives during cloudy weather produces rainfall are described in a letter from James Staines.

"Some years ago," he says, "an experiment was tried in the Cuddapah district of southern India with considerable success. I am part owner of an estate in the Seramully hills, which is situated in a particularly dry zone. For several seasons poor coffee crops withered away from lack of rain during July and August."

"When I was visiting the estate in July, 1905, I noticed that heavy clouds gathered every afternoon and I thought that if we had been in a position to fire explosive rockets from the highest peak of the hills, about 4,500 feet, a shower of rain might have been produced."

"I therefore arranged to have a supply of rockets kept on the estate and fired off every afternoon at the rate of one rocket every five minutes, but only when the condition of the atmosphere was such that heavy rain threatened on all sides."

"Whether rain has fallen in response to these explosives or not the fact remains that ever since we first tried the experiment we have been fortunate enough to catch sufficient moisture to enable the crops to survive the drought."

Firing into the clouds with the object of causing rain was practiced for several years in southern Germany, Switzerland and France, but seems to have been abandoned some time ago. The idea was to protect the vineyards and other cultivations from damage by hailstorms. It being thought that by the discharge of large guns rain would fall, and that the danger from hailstorms would be averted.—London Daily Mail.

Lightning Seemingly at Play.
That the gambols of electricity are most fearful and wonderful was illustrated in the month of June, 1873, when, according to Flannuarian, the electric current entered a butcher's shop and followed the iron bars from which the quarters of meat were hung until it reached a hook on which the skinned carcass of a whole ox was suspended. This was galvanized, and for several seconds it was frightfully contorted as if in convulsions.

Advertising is Publicity

The value of newspaper advertising is based on circulation.

The price of newspaper advertising is determined on a basis of three cents per thousand circulation.

The paper with 100,000 circulation charges three dollars per inch.

The paper with 10,000 circulation charges thirty cents per inch.

The paper with 5,000 circulation charges fifteen cents per inch.

The paper with 2,000 circulation, on the same basis, is entitled to six cents per inch, and the paper with 1,000 circulation to three cents per inch.

The man who invests his money in newspaper advertising is entitled to value received, and has a right to know what he is buying.

The Daily Gazette has a circulation of 5,600 plus. The advertising rates on a 1,000 inch contract are fifteen cents per inch or two and two-third cents per thousand circulation.

Advertisers in the Gazette secure value received and PAY LESS THAN THE MARKET PRICE FOR SERVICE. The paper covers the local field, and is found in 90 per cent of the homes, and read by 35,000 people.

HEART AND HOME TALKS

BY BARBARA BOYD

Turning Gray Days to Gold.

A YOUNG girl writes rather bitterly of the grayness of her existence. She has to work to earn her living, and she earns barely enough for necessities. So her life is monotonous. She has little pleasure. And she doesn't see much use in living, when life is lived this way.

She is not alone in her experience. There are thousands and thousands of women the country over heroically living just such gray, monotonous lives. Some are living even harder lives than this girl's. One woman who entered a department store as a girl of twenty, for thirty years cared for an invalid father in addition to her store duties. Night and morning she ministered to him, and when he passed on to the other life, she was a silver-haired woman. All her youth went in this grinding toil. Her days, from the point of view of work, were the grayest of the gray; for her salary was slender, and care and anxiety to do her work so as to hold her position, and to make ends meet were her companions day and night.

What is the purpose of such lives? Is it intended that those, or any other life, shall be gray? I think not. I think these lives are gray, because these who live them do not know of the sun that is shining, of the light that is ready to irradiate them, if they will open the windows of their soul and let it in.

There seems no purpose in such a life, because there is no understanding of life. This girl and other girls like her often do not think. They rebel. Their mind is filled with rebellion against the monotony and grayness of their existence, instead of their probing deeply to see if there is not a reason for it, a reason which if understood, would flood their days with gold.

One of the purposes of life is surely development, not getting ahead solely in material things, but getting ahead in soul things. We must find ourselves, our real self; and we can only do this by recognizing the lower and leaving it behind. And to come to know ourselves as a spiritual being with the heritage of immortality and perfection is to know a joy whose keenness is beyond anything the world can offer.

And this joy, this knowledge is the light which is ready to enter our lives and dispense forever its grayness, if we will let it in. No girl will have gray days if she will come to this glorious understanding of life. For when she once knows herself as a perfect spiritual being, a manifestation and a reflection of the infinite and divine, life becomes a joyous thing. Gray turns to gold.

And sometimes it is in this very grayness and monotony that we come to this knowledge. The humdrum duties that prick and annoy show us the unworthiness of letting selfishness and temper and indifference rule us, and the beauty of rising above them, of finding the better self that is above them, of letting this better self develop, or really of letting ourselves come into our own—the kingdom of understanding and of enjoyment of all that is ours.

And the one who will diligently seek will find. No longer should one's mind and time be filled with rebellion. Rather set the mind upon discovering the purpose. Seek the light. For the light is there ready to turn gray days to gold.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

I THINK my mother ought to be called the "where is it lady," a quaint little by one commented.

He was the youngest of a large family, and he had heard his mother so often appealed to in this way by the various members of the household that he had good reason for his suggestion.

I fancy there are a good many homes in which the "where is it lady" might be one of the household's titles.

For I have myself observed not a few families where the habit of appealing to mother to find anything which does not come readily to hand is a fixed one.

Now, of course, a mother's mind would naturally be the best index of the home and a mother is inevitably a last resort to which to appeal when anything simply can't be found.

But here's the rub. I think she should be kept as a last and not a first resort.

And a first resort is what she is frequently made. It is so much easier to say, "Where is so-and-so?" and to throw the responsibility onto mother's mind, than to use your own brains; it is so much simpler to say, "I can't find something or other," and have mother come down or up and help you hunt than to go poking about by yourself, that many of us get into the habit of making no effort to do anything else.

"What have you done with that magazine I was reading last night," cries father. "It's gone and I was right under father's elbow, hidden only by a newspaper."

"Where on earth is the tie that goes with my dress suit," calls big brother, and mother tells up the stairs and finds it right in his handkerchief box, where he left it the last time he went to a wedding.

"Mother, I can't find my pumps anywhere. I'm sure Bridget did something with them when she swept," fulminates big sister. And mother leaves her sewing and locates the pumps in the closet, hidden only by the folds of sister's dressing gown, right where big sister might have found them very easily herself if she had only really tried before she called mother.

"Where is the milk bottle?" I hear big brother call. "If you don't tell me where the milk bottle is," sputters little brother. He has seen that milk bottle on the pantry shelf a dozen times, of course, mother gets up and sets it for him.

And all this means that that mother must bear all the body and brain fatigue that hunting for things means—and myself, I think there is nothing more tiring than hunting for things—which should be distributed over the shoulders of the whole family.

Now I believe that "I can't find it," and "Where is it?" are habits that all children fall into unless they are checked.

And I think they should be checked. Both for mother's sake and their own.

A child who is taught to hunt for things until he finds them will have more self reliance and initiative than the child who gets into the "Where is it?" habit.

A mother whose family does their own hunting for things instead of piling it all on her shoulders, will have less care to lessen her chances of becoming a happy old grandmother.

Thought for Today

By MRS. ROBERT N. LAPOLETTE

RYTHM.

T HROUGHOUT nature normal action tends to be rhythmic. The automatic acts of the body are rhythmic—the beating of the heart and taking of the breath. Disturbance of this rhythm is evidence of disorder. The same law should govern acquired action. The flight of a bird, the beat of the horse's hoofs, the tread of a regiment, the grace of the dance, hold and soothe and fascinate by their rhythm.

The acquisition of skill, of grace, is the elimination of useless movements, the learning to use with precision and ease just the muscles, and just the amount of energy required. What we call awkwardness is often simply the expression of a large capacity for growth, the manifestation of reserve strength, great physical power, which does not readily flow through the right channels. The avenues once open, the instrument of expression once trained and disciplined, the inner force gives to action a commanding grace that those less richly endowed can never hope to attain.

Yet how common the impression that grace of movement is a natural gift. Like fine eyes or a good nose—much to be desired, but any attempt to acquire, foolish and hopeless. There is, of course, great difference in natural endowment. But that which the whole theory of mind education is that we all need and all improve with a certain amount of the same kind of training.

The less natural bodily control, the more necessary for cultivation. All the work of artisans shows that grace can be acquired. The farmer with his scythe, the blacksmith at his anvil, the mason with his trowel, the seamstress with her needle, even the "Madonna of the Tube," are illustrations of what education will do for movement. It is surprising how much we can accomplish by conscious effort. Awkwardness, haste, and noise can be eliminated, and grace, composure and quiet acquired, just by persistent and self-watchfulness.

The KITCHEN CABINET

There's a divinity that shapes our ends, rough-hew them how we may.

Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan the outward habit by the inward man. —Shakespeare.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

When the season for the delicious venison opens be prepared to cook and serve a nice joint with the spicy wild grape jelly.

Venison steak with chestnut sauce is another favorite.

Chestnut Sauce.—Fry one-half an onion and six slices of carrot, cut in small pieces, in two tablespoonsful of butter five minutes. Add three tablespoonsful of flour and stir until well browned; then add a cup and a half of soup stock, a sprig of parsley, a bit of bayleaf, eight peppercorns and a teaspoonful of salt. Let simmer twenty minutes, strain and add a cup of boiled chestnuts, a tablespoonful of butter and two of orange juice.

Squirrel Pie.—After the squirrels are cleaned and singed, separate into pieces at the joints—mine in all. Put these into a casserole or earthen dish, add salt and pepper and a pint of well-seasoned chicken stock. If at hand, otherwise boiling water will do. Cook covered about two hours in a moderate oven. Stir in two or three tablespoonsful of flour and a half teaspoon of salt and a generous sprinkling of pepper; mix with cold water and add to the gravy in the dish. Cover with a rich crust and bake about twenty minutes. Do not forget to leave a vent in the crust to allow the steam and gases to escape.

Cream of Chestnut Soup.—Shell and blanch a pint of chestnuts and cook until tender in chicken broth. Press through a sieve. Add more broth, season with salt, pepper and onion juice. Melt a fourth of a cup of butter and add a fourth of a cup of flour. When well blended add a cup of milk and a cup of cream. Stir until boiling; add the broth and serve at once.

Nellie Maxwell.

Puzzled.

"Biggie can't get away from his weather talk," said the critical friend.

"Does he ask if it is hot enough for you?"

"No, but at dinner, when the waiter spilled a cup of tea down his back he said he didn't know which was more objectionable, the heat or the humidity."

APPLES.

Apples contain but a small amount of solid matter, chiefly sugar, but their minerals, being perfectly assimilable, and their malic acid being beneficial in most cases, they are to be regarded as a most valuable food. In a few peculiar conditions of the liver and in excessive acidity they may be injurious, but they are especially beneficial in terpidity of the liver and excessive alkaline conditions (the opposite of acid). The peach differs little from the apple, but it spoils easily while the apple keeps good for months. There is more or less danger in spoiled or unripe fruit, and a bad speck indicates that the entire fruit is spoiling. Boiling, of course, counteracts fermentation, but if perfectly sound an apple is best eaten in the morning, with other fruits, not with cereals, vegetables or meat.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

THE CRAZY PREACHER OF KENT.

By A. W. MACY.

For twenty years John Ball, "the crazy preacher of Kent," harangued the people, in season and out, wherever he could get an audience. He had but one text; and from that he always preached: "When Adam delv'd and Eve span,"

Who then was the gentleman? On this he rung the changes, but always keeping to the front the equality of men. Nothing daunted him. In spite of ridicule and prison cells and whippings, he kept on preaching. Not until Wat Tyler's rebellion collapsed and his own head was cut off, did he stop. Four hundred years later the doctrine he preached was incorporated in the American Declaration of Independence.

This is a charming design in braiding and embroidery, and is especially suitable for linen dresses. Mercerized coronation or soutache braid should be sewed with small stitches along the lines of the design. The dots are worked solid in mercerized cotton No. 18.

Circumstances Alter Cases.
"Yes, Miss Maybelle is here at the beach."
"It met her in town last winter; a naughty beauty."
"Not so excessively naughty. Men go scarce down here."

Their Chance.

"I wonder when the families of fashionable women ever get a chance to see them?"
"Why, don't they occasionally have 'at home'?"

Clean pots and pans with GOLD DUST

Germes of decay accumulate on oft-used pots and pans, and ordinary soap and water only clean off the surface.

Gold Dust does the work—and does it right. It digs deep after germes, cleans like a new whistle and leaves your pots and pans as new, as bright as the day they were new—and sanitarily safe.

Gold Dust does this work in just half the time required by soap or any other cleanser. Does it better, too.

Gold Dust cleans everything like magic.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

ANOTHER CONTEST OPENED FOR WOMEN GAZETTE READERS

How Do You Plan Your Laying In of Winter Supplies or Do You Follow the Old Custom?

In the days of our grandparents, the preparation for the winter months was an important item in the household affairs. The busy days of laying in the winter supply of vegetables, the making of the pies to last all winter—those marked "M" were mince, "A" for apple and so on down the line. The pantry shelves filled with good things from which the housewife could feed an army of hungry people are gone with other old customs. The modern methods, the telephone, the up-to-date grocery stores, the increased facility for travel and bringing the goods of the southland to our doors in coldest weather, have all changed the conditions.

However, in many a household the winter supply of food that will keep is still laid in. Some, however, find it just as economical to buy as needed, especially those living in flats, with limited space to store supplies. It is with the view of finding out just what the modern housewife does in this particular that the present contest is started. Just how she plans for winter, for emergency and what arrangements she makes.

Think this over and then write your views to the "CONTEST EDITOR OF THE GAZETTE."

This is the time of the year when one must think of the cold, raw January and February days. Do you still follow the old method of your ancestors? Will you follow the old methods of your ancestors? Will you follow the old methods of your ancestors? Will you follow the old methods of your ancestors?

Whichever method you follow it will be interesting reading and perhaps help some other housewife to solve this financial and difficult problem. The contest is open to all women readers of the Gazette. The winner's wife who has her supplies for the most part at hand, the resident of the flat who must depend on the grocery near by, the woman who buys canned goods by the case, lays in barrels of apples and potatoes, has her mince meat in crocks ready for use, shelves full of preserves and pickles, are asked to respond to this contest.

More details will follow this first article as to just what to write about and how to handle your subject, so watch this page closely. The contest will close the 15th of November and the prizes will be awarded immediately, so that they can be utilized in preparing the Thanksgiving dinner.

Write on one side of the paper only. Do not make the answers more than five hundred words and address all questions and communications to the "CONTEST EDITOR OF THE GAZETTE."

The following are the prizes offered for the best five articles received.

First Prize.—Set of Dishes.
Second Prize.—Half Dozen Silver Tea Spoons.
Third Prize.—Dance Courtesy Cook Book.
Fourth Prize.—Family Scales.
Fifth Prize.—Vacuum Bottle.

Knew His Wife.

It is recorded of an old English farmer that, in giving instructions for his will, he directed a legacy of one hundred pounds be given to his widow. Being informed that some distinction was usually made in case the widow married again, he doubled the sum; and when told that this was quite contrary to custom, he said, with heart-felt sympathy for his possible successor, "Aye, but him as gets her'll deserve it."

OWES HER HEALTH

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, your Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely over with-out it in the house."

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls to build them up and make them strong and well. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has always helped her."

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to these wonderful medicines."

—Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich., R.F.D. 3.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases.

The Girl from His Town

By Marie Van Vorst.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY M. G. KETNER.

COPYRIGHT 1910 BY The Bobbs-Merrill Company

Ruggles patted his shirt front and adjusted his cravat.

"My idea," he told her, "all the blame on me, Miss Lane. Charge it up to me! Dan here had cold feet from the first. He said you wouldn't come."

She laughed deliciously.

"He did? Hasn't much faith, has he?"

Miss Lane drew her long gloves off, touched the orchids with her little hands, on which the ever present rings flashed, and went on talking to Ruggles, to whom she seemed to want to address her conversation.

"I'm simply crazy over these flowers."

The older man showed his pleasure. "My choice again! Waked up myself and chose the bunch, blame me again; ditto dinner; mine from start to finish—hope you'll like it. I would have added some Montana peas and some chocolate soda water, only I thought you might not understand the joke."

Miss Lane beamed on him. Although he was unconscious of it, she was not fully at ease; he was not the kind of man she had expected to see. Accustomed to young fellows like the boy and their mad devotion, accustomed to men with whom she could be herself, the big, bluff, middle-aged gentleman with his painfully correct tie, his rumpled iron-gray hair, and his deference to her, though an unusual diversion, was a little embarrassing.

"Oh, I know your dinner is ripping, Mr. Ruggles. I'm on a diet of milk and eggs myself, and I expect your order didn't take in those." But at his fallen countenance she hurried to say "Oh, I wouldn't have told you that if I hadn't been intending to break through."

And with childlike anticipation she clapped her hands and said: "We're going to have lots of fun. Just think, they don't know what that means here in London. They say 'beats of sport, you know.' It's just the American who know what 'lots of fun' is, isn't it?"

Near her Dan-Blair's young eyes were drinking in the spectacle of delicate beauty beautifully gowned, of soft skin, glorious hair, and he gazed like a child at a pantomime. Under his breath he exclaimed now, with effusion, "You bet your life we are going to have lots of fun!" And turning to him, Miss Lane said:

"Six chocolate sodas running?"

"Oh, don't," he begged, "not that kind of jag."

She shook with laughter.

"Are you from Blainetown, Mr. Ruggles? I don't think I ever saw you there."

And the Westerner returned: "Well, from what Dan tells me, you're not much of a fixture yourself, Miss Lane. You were just about born and then kidnapped."

Her gay expression faded. And she repeated his word, "Kidnaped? That's a good word for it, Mr. Ruggles."

She picked up between her fingers a strand of the green fern, and looked at its delicate tracery as it lay on the palm of her hand.

"I sang one day after a missionary sermon in the Presbyterian Church."

"He Took Me Every Night to See You Dance Until I Baked, Miss Lane."

She interrupted herself with a short laugh. "But I know you're not thinking of writing my biography, are you?"

And it was Dan's voice that urged her. "Say, do go on. I was there that day with my father, and you sang simply out of sight."

"Yes," she accepted, "out of sight of Blainetown and everybody I ever knew. I went away the next day." She lifted her glass of champagne to her lips. "Here's one thing I oughtn't to do," she said, "but I'm going to just the same. I'm going to do everything I want this evening. Remember, I let you drink six glasses of chocolate soda once." She drained her glass and her friends drank with her. "I like this soup awfully. What is it?"—just touching it with her spoon.

"Why," Ruggles hastened to tell her, "it ain't a party soup, it's Scotch broth. But somehow it sounded good on the bill of fare. I fixed the rest of the dinner up for you and Dan, but I let myself go on the soup, it's my favorite."

She did not eat it, however, although she said it was splendid and that she was crazy about it.

"Did you come East then?" Dan returned to what she had been saying.

"Yes, that week; went to Paris and all over the place."

She instantly fell into a sort of melancholy. It was easy to be seen that she did not want to talk about her past and yet that it fascinated her.

"Just think of it!" he exclaimed.

"I never heard a word about you until I heard you sing the other night." The actress laughed and told him that he had made up for lost time, and that he was a regular "alter" now at the Gaiety.

Ruggles said, "He took me every night to see you dance until I baked, Miss Lane."

"Still, it's a perfectly great show, Mr. Ruggles, don't you think so? I like it better than any part I ever had. I am interested about it for the sake of the man who wrote it, too. It's his first opera; he's an invalid and has a wife and five kids to look after."

And Ruggles replied, "Oh, gracious! I feel better than ever, having gone ten times, although I wasn't very sore about it before! Ain't you going to do anything?"

She only picked at her food, drinking what she poured in her glass, and every time she spoke to Dan a look of charming kindness crossed her face, an expression of good fellowship which Ruggles noted with interest.

"I wish you could have seen this same author today at the rehearsal of the play," Letty Lane went on. "He's too ill to walk and they had to carry his apartments after the theater. He lives in three rooms with his whole family and he's had so many debts and so much trouble and such a poor contract that he hasn't made much out of this new piece. He hugged and kissed me until I thought he would break my neck."

London had gone mad over Letty Lane, whose traits and contour wore the admiration of the world at large and well-known even to the newsboys, and whose likeness was nearly as familiar as that of the Madonnas of old. Her face was oval and perfectly formed, with the reddest of mouths—the most delicious and softest of mouths—the line of her brows clear and straight, and her gray eyes large and as innocent and appealing as a child's; under their long lashes they opened up like flowers. It was said that no man could withstand their appeal; that she had but to look to make a man her slave; and as more than once she turned to Dan, smiling and gracious, Ruggles watched her, mutely thinking of what he had heard this day, for after her letter came accepting their invitation he had taken pains to find out the things he wanted to know. It had not been difficult. As her face and form were public, on every post-card and in every photographer's shop, so the actress' reputation was the property of the public.

As Ruggles repeated these things to himself, he watched her beside the son of his old friend. They were talking—rather she was—and behind the orchids and the ferns her voice was sweet and entrancing. Ruggles tried to appreciate his bill of fare while the two appreciated each other. It was strange to Dan to have her so near and so approachable. His sights of her off the stage had been so slight and fleeting. On the boards she had seemed to be an unreal creation made for the public alone. Her dress, cut fearlessly low, displayed her lovely young bosom—soft, bloomy, white as a shell—and her head and ears were as delicate as the petals of a white rose. Low in the tape of her neck, her golden hair lay lightly, and from its soft masses fragrance came to him.

Ruggles could hear her say: "Roach came to the house and told my people that I had a fortune in my voice. I was living with my uncle and my stepmother and working in the store. And that same day your father sent down a check for five hundred dollars. He said it was 'for the little girl with the sweet voice,' and it given me a lot of pleasure to think that I began my lessons on that money."

The son of old Dan Blair said earnestly: "I'm darned glad you did—I'm darned glad you did!"

Letty Lane nodded. "So am I. But," with some sharpness, "I don't see why you speak that way. I've earned my way. I made a fortune for Roach all right."

"You mean the man you married?"

"Married—goodness gracious, what made you think that?" She threw back her pretty head and laughed—a laugh with the least possible merriment in it. "Oh, heavens, marry old Job Roach! So they say that, do they? I never heard that. I hear a lot, but I never heard that fairy tale. She put her hands to her cheeks, which had grown crimson. "That's not true!"

Dan swore at himself for his tactless stupidity.

Ruggles had heard both sides. She was adored by the poor, and as far as rumor knew, she spent thousands on the London paupers, and the Westerner, who had never been given to revelling in scandals and to whom there was something wicked in speaking ill of a woman, no matter whom she might be, listened with embarrassment to tales he had been told in answer to his other questions; and turned with relief to the stories of Letty Lane's charity, and to the stories of her popularity and her success. They were more agreeable, but they couldn't make him forget the rest, and now as he looked at her face across the bouquet of orchids and ferns, it was with a sinking of heart, a great pity for her, and still a decided enmity. He disapproved of her down to the ground. He didn't let himself think how he felt, but it was for the boy. Ruggles was not a man of the world in any sense; he was simple and Puritan in his judgments, and his gentle nature and his big heart kept him from Pharisaical and strenuous measures. He had been led in what he was doing tonight by a diplomacy and a common sense that few men east of the Mississippi would have thought out under the circumstances.

"Tell Mr. Ruggles," he heard Dan

say to her, "tell him—tell him!"

And she answered:

"I was telling Mr. Blair that, as he is so frightfully rich, I want him to give me some money."

Ruggles gasped, but answered quietly:

"Well, he's a great giver, Miss Lane."

"I guess he is if he's like his father!" she returned. "I am trying to get a lot, though, out of him, and when you asked me to dine tonight I said to myself, 'I'll accept, for it will be a good time to ask Mr. Blair to help me out in what I want to do.'"

At Ruggles' face she smiled sweetly and said graciously:

"Oh, don't think I wouldn't have come anyway. But I'm awfully tired these days, and going out to supper is just one thing too much to do! I want Mr. Blair," she said, turning to Ruggles as if she knew a word from him would make the thing go through, "to help me build a rest home down on the English coast, for girls who get discouraged in their art. When I think of the luck I have had and how these things have been from the beginning, and how money has just poured in, why," she said ardently, "it just makes my heart ache to think of the girls who try and fail, who go on for a little while and have to give up. You can't tell," she nodded to Ruggles, as though she were herself a matron of forty—"you can't tell what their temptations are or what comes up to make them go to pieces."

Waterproof Glue.

To make an impermeable glue, soak ordinary glue in water until it softens, and remove it before it has lost its primitive form. After this dissolve it in linseed oil over a slow fire until it is brought to the consistency of a jelly. This glue may be used for joining any kind of material. In addition to strength and hardness, it has the advantage of resisting the action of water.

TESTED AND PROVEN.

There is a Heap of Solace in Being Able to Depend Upon a Well-Earned Reputation.

For months Janesville readers have seen the constant expression of praise for Doan's Kidney Pills, and read about the good work they have done in this locality. Not another remedy ever produced such convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. E. J. O'Brien, 2020 W. Blair St., Janesville, Wis., says: "It is with pleasure that I recommend Doan's kidney complaint, but since using know whereof I speak, when I say that they are a reliable kidney medicine. For ten years I suffered from kidney complaint, but since using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the People's Drug Co., I have enjoyed much better health. I hope that my statement will lead other kidney sufferers to try Doan's Kidney Pills." (Statement given in August, 1908.)

When Mrs. O'Brien was interviewed on September 23, 1910, she added to the above: "I am still glad to say a word in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. Occasionally during the past two years when I have needed a kidney medicine, I have taken this remedy and the results have always been satisfactory."

FORTY YEARS AGO.

From the Janesville Gazette, October 11, 1871—Not a landmark is left to show where the city of Peshigo stood. Three hundred human beings were reported as being burned to death. Sixty horses burned in one stable. The survivors are all destitute and are coming to Green Bay by every boat. Fifty-five persons were burned to death at Williamson's mill which is a short distance from Peshigo.
Reports from Chicago state that St. Louis has sent one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for the relief of the sufferers. In addition to this cash donation many of provisions and clothing were sent from that place. Quite a number of the Janesville citizens left on the train for Chicago yesterday and today to look after the welfare of relatives and friends that they have in that city.
The rotary steamer arrived here from Chicago last night.

TIP QUESTION IS SERIOUS.

Gratitudes of the Season. Give a Severe Jolt to Man of Small Income.

"This tip business," said a man of small income, "has come to be a serious matter."
"Every summer I send my wife and daughter to the country, to a modest hotel in a quiet place—does them good and doesn't cost us much more than it would to have them stay home, or didn't have to."

"Years ago we gave some small tips, a little to the waitress and a little to the chambermaid, amounts not great, but now we have to give more to them and we have to give also to the chef and to the housekeeper and so on, something to everybody that does something for us. It seems to be the custom, and it all counts up."

"This year, for instance, I sent the folks along weekly the little checks for their board and their other moderate expenses—and they are always careful about those—and everything is going along very pleasantly and I see no settling the financial problem very nicely, and then a week or two before they are coming home we put down a little memorandum of the tips to give when they come away, and do you know that this year these amounted to $30."

"Thirty dollars; and that gives me just as it does every year—quite a little jolt. I know it's coming, but I never realize it till it comes."
"You know what Lincoln said about paying bills? That it was easier to pay a big bill if you had the money than a little bill if you hadn't, and that sum up on the tips hits us in something that way. We pay 'em, but it does sort of put the kibosh on our nice little financial schedule."

Truth About "Midnight Oil."
People talk about the midnight oil as if it had some virtue attached to it. In truth, oil is more over-work, or means that you have neglected some duty to which you should have attended before the everet heat below the horizon.—Edward Everett Hale.
